Summary: Poem: Was the fire of the Forerunners enough to sway the tides of the Flood? No. But nor could the tides overcome the fire. In the end, devastation awaited both parties.

Halo: Flood and Fire

This is what happens when an unstoppable force meets an immovable object.

The Joker, _The Dark Knight_

>Flood and Fire

Where eternal will meets another,

Catastrophe awaits.

Neither side will yield to other,

Will man their walls and gates.

From the Outsiders' perspective,

Stagnation's been too long.

To Insiders' perspective,

This plague does not belong.

Both beasts the other's nemesis,

Eternal, will not yield.

Planets die and stars doth cry,
As both sides take to field.

One side seeks a new beginning,
To remake the galaxy anew.
The others faithful to the past,
To Mantle holding true.

One side offers a solution,
Offers everlasting glory.
One side believes in Living Time,
A pre-determined story.

The stars are red, planets are dead,
Upon scorched earth stars glow.
Neither force or object win,
As flood and fire show.

End
